DECISION GIVEN AGAINST HACKMEN

Only One of the Seven Guides Arrested is Shown to be Innocent and Escapes Paying Fine and Costs. Three Pleaded Guilty.

Arresting one and finding three others guilty, while another admitted the charge preferred, Squire Harnish on Tuesday evening disposed of the cases against five hackmen, charged by Chief of Police Emmons with over-stepping the two foot limit prescribed by the borough ordinance as the distance hackmen may go from the curb in soliciting tourists.

Thaddeus Warren was the only one of the seven, on whom warrants were served, who escaped receiving a sentence of a fine and costs. Mr. Warren at the hearing presented five or six witnesses to show that, at the time of the alleged offense, he was at his automobile and did not violate the ordinance. On this testimony he was acquitted.

Samuel Vaughn admitted his guilt before Squire Harnish and was given $2 fine and costs. Morgan Mickle and James Weikert were found guilty by the Squire and given a similar sentence, while George J. Bushman, also found guilty, was fined $5 and costs. The fine in Mr. Bushman's case was increased owing to the fact that it was his second offense, the first having been committed only a few days prior to the one for which the last warrant was served.

It is intimated that one or more of the offenders may take their cases to court. The costs have not yet been computed.

Andrew Hartman and John Hoofnagle did not stand trial before Squire Harnish but paid their $2 and costs without asking a hearing.

In Squire Harnish's court on Monday a surety of the peace case brought by Mrs. Alice Graft, of New York City, against her husband, George W. Graft, of Bonnevilleville, was heard, dismissed and the costs placed upon the woman. Mrs. Graft claimed that her husband had threatened to do her harm but the testimony was of the hearsay variety and the charge was not sustained.

BERLIN TO YORK IS LATEST RUMOR

Story from Latter Town Says Adams County Residents Seek an Outlet by New Road. Mr. Leas Refuses Proposal by Citizens.

According to a story given out in York the committee of citizens, who were appointed at a meeting held in East Berlin, last Thursday night, to confer with William G. Leas, owner of the East Berlin Branch railway, which runs from Berlin to Abbottstown and Berlin Junction, and who were instructed to make arrangements to take over the branch, provided a reasonable adjustment could be made with Mr. Leas, is likely to report at the meeting to be held at East Berlin on Friday evening of this week, that a new line be constructed from East Berlin to York.

The committee was also instructed to call the attention of the Public Service Commission to the discontinuance of the East Berlin Branch, believing that arrangements might be made through the Public Service Commission to continue the services of this railway.

About a year ago, the question of constructing an electrical line to York was agitated among the citizens at East Berlin and community. Several routes were surveyed and a number of subscriptions were secured, but the project did not meet sufficient encouragement to justify those who were at its head to carry it through, but it is now the conviction of many of the leading business men in East Berlin, Abbottstown and other portions of that part of the county, that some such project will go through without question, as these two towns are now cut off from any service whatever, so far as either electrical or steam railway is concerned.

As a result of this condition, the agricultural interests of the surrounding communities is suffering greatly and the residents of East Berlin and Abbottstown are determined to secure relief from these undesirable conditions through one source or another.

New Yorker Buys Plant at Hagerstown for $58,200.

Under a mortgage foreclosure the Hagerstown plant of the Montross Metal Casket Company, a million-dollar corporation, which went into the hands of receivers last spring, was sold Tuesday to James Morrison, Jr., of New York, for $58,200. The property includes nine acres of land located in the southern suburbs, on which are erected extensive factory buildings costing $125,000, a number of metal casket patents and a large amount of personal property. The plant was originally built by the Crawford Bicycle Company and in 1908 was sold to the Montross concern by the Pope Manufacturing Company for $57,000. It is said the new purchaser will continue the business on a large scale.

NO NEW TRIAL FOR HANOVER

Value of Borough Sewer System as Originally Fixed Must Stand. Various Chapters in History of their Plant and Litigation.

Judge Ross of York County has declined to grant a new trial in the suit of the borough of Hanover, against the Hanover Sewer Company, for deciding the value of the sewerage system, which the borough contemplates taking over, from the company.

A jury at the time the case was heard in Court, last March, fixed the value at $119,454, which the borough authorities considered excessive, and it was to have this valuation reduced, if possible, at a re-hearing that the borough asked for a new trial. The valuation is a matter of controversy, largely owing to the element of the value of the franchise, the actual cost of the plant being much less than the amount named above.

It is said that the borough council originally granted the franchise, free of cost, for the installing of a sewerage system for house drainage, to local interests, and this franchise was transferred to subsequent owners of the Hanover Sewer Company, who built the system about 1902 or 1903.

In 1912 on the ground that the company was not earning sufficient to make it profitable a new schedule of rates was established, for sewerage connections and service, which was a very marked advance over the rates formerly charged, the new rates being approximately in many cases double the old rates.

This action of the company resulted in an agitation in favor of the borough taking control of the system, but the sewer company had to be paid a fair valuation for its property. The Company asked $160,000, which was later reduced to $150,000, for its plant and franchise to be paid on easy terms. This proposal was declined. The board of state appraisers, provided to make such valuations, fixed the cost at $75,000, which was not acceptable to the Company.

The borough subsequently instituted proceedings in court to have the value adjudicated, with the result as stated above.

The Hanover Sewer Company at present is controlled by Philadelphia interests.

RUMOR OF DISASTER TO GERMAN RIGHT WING

Von Kluck's Forces Said to be Broken.

REPORT NOT CONFIRMED

London Hears He Offered to Quit if Army Was Paroled.

JOFFRE REJECTED TERMS

Last French Bulletin Says Conditions Are Unchanged.

London, Sept. 30.—A late dispatch from Paris states that it is reported there that the German right wing is retreating from its fortified positions between the Aisne and the Somme rivers.

It is also reported that the allied armies have succeeded in cutting the German line of communications, and that part of General Von Kluck's army is in grave danger.

A Paris dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company says:

"It is stated here tonight (Tuesday) that the German right wing has been entirely broken and is now being pursued by the allies. All the automobiles in northern France have been requisitioned for the purposes of pursuit."

The British war office says that it has no confirmation of this report and can add nothing to the French official bulletin, which states that the Germans are still attacking the French left, but that in every instance they have been repulsed.

The latest French bulletin says: "There is nothing new in the situation."

Story of German Reverse.

The Paris dispatch, reporting the reverse to Von Kluck, is:

"The right wing of the German army in France is in full retreat, according to information from the north. General Von Kluck has offered to surrender to General Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, it is said, if the Germans are allowed to retire to their own country."

According to reports from the north, General Von Kluck's army began to break on Saturday under the terrific pounding of the French and British. The French had extended their lines to Compiègne, less than fifty miles from the Belgian border, and ten miles south of Baupré, where they were vigorously assaulting the rear of the German right and the troops defending Von Kluck's line of communication into Belgium.

Reported Peace Parley.

"It was then that General Von Kluck opened the peace parley. In addition to demanding safe conduct to Germany, he agreed to guarantee that his soldiers would not take up arms again during the war. General Joffre's reply to the German general's terms was to redouble the fury of the French bombardment."

"When the German retreat began, it is reported, mitrailleuses were mounted on automobile trucks and sent in pursuit of the German army."

"According to unofficial information, the Germans were exhausted. They could not make rapid progress and lost heavily. They are reported to have left behind many guns and a large quantity of munitions."

"The consummation of this enveloping movement around Von Kluck's army is believed to have been the cause of the recent tightening of the censorship. General Von Buelow's German army is reported to be in grave danger."

French Confident of Victory.

It is the opinion of foreign military attaches that in any event the battle which will end the war will be fought soon, probably before the extreme cold weather sets in. Most of these men look for simultaneous conflicts, one in Belgium and west of the Rhine, and the other in the eastern theater of operations.

French officers who have returned from the front seem to share the same opinion. They declare that there is a decided contrast between the spirit of the Germans and that of the allies. The French soldiers are absolutely confident of victory. In fact they are so convinced that the chief difficulty of the officers is keeping their troops from recklessly exposing themselves.

It is reported that the Germans have renewed their operations in upper Alsace and that fierce fighting is again in progress in the vicinity of Muehlenhausen.

The Germans continue their assaults against the Verdun-Toul line of forts, but it is officially denied that they have made any substantial progress. While no authentic figures are obtainable from military headquarters, officers who are familiar with the situation there, declare that the German casualties in the battle of the Aisne number fully 150,000 in killed, wounded and missing. The losses of the allies, they say, will probably reach 100,000, at as many points of the line it has been found necessary to deliver frontal attacks on heavily entrenched positions.

In the case of the Germans, it is said, they have a far higher percentage of dead than the allies. The British have lost heavily, but all of the gaps in their forces have been filled with the members of the latest expedition to reach France.

The French Statement.

The following official communication was issued in Paris:

"On our left wing, to the north of the Somme and between the Somme and the Oise, the enemy has attempted night and day attacks and has been repulsed. On the north of the Aisne there is no change."

"At the center, in the Champagne district, and to the east of the Argonne, the enemy has been engaged in conducting a heavy bombardment of our position. Between the Argonne region and the Meuse slight progress has been made by our troops, who find themselves facing strongly organized positions on the heights of the Meuse."

"In the Woëvre section and on our right wing (Lorraine and the Vosges) no notable change has occurred. In a general way, our line is thrown east and west along a point from the region of Pont-aux-Mousses, Arcmont, the Meuse, the region of St. Mihiel, the heights to the north of Spada and a part of the heights of the Meuse to the southeast of Verdun."

"Between Verdun and Rheims the central front is bounded by a line passing through the region of Varennes to the north of Souain and Chaussee Romaine, and at Rheims encloses the approaches to Rheims, the Rheims road to Berry-au-Bac and the heights called the Chemin du Dames."

"On the right bank of the River Aisne this line follows the river as far as the region of Soissons. Between Soissons and the forest of L'Aigle it includes the first plateaus of the right bank of the Aisne. Between the Rivers Oise and Somme this line corresponds to the front to Ribecourt (occupied by us), Lassigny (occupied by the enemy), Roye (occupied by us) and Chalons (the enemy's)."

"To the north of the Somme the line stretches across the plateau between Albert and Chaumont."

The German Statement.

"The war office in Berlin in its official statement declared the operations in France had settled down to a general artillery duel, interspersed with frequent assaults at the vital points along the line."

The report says: "While the fighting is general, it is not apparent at any line of the battle that the conflict has entered into deciding stages. The German right has been subjected to severe pressure, but every attempt to penetrate it has been repelled with great loss to the enemy."

"On the center there has been no decided change for nearly a week, while on the left the fighting continues. Our forces continue to make gains along the lines of the Meuse."

Colonel Gordon a Prisoner.

London, Sept. 30.—Colonel Frederick Gordon, of the Gordon Highlanders, who was reported to have been killed in action on the continent, is a prisoner in Germany. James W. Gerard, the American ambassador in Berlin, sent word to the Gordon family that Colonel Gordon is alive, but a prisoner in German hands.

BOMBARD TOWN OF ALOST

The Kaiser's Officers Are Quoted as Saying They Can Take Seaport
Whenever They Are Ready.

Antwerp, Sept. 30.—After a severe bombardment the Germans have occupied Malines (Mechlin), thirteen miles south of this city, according to an official announcement given out by the war office.

The Germans have also bombarded the forts at Wavre, St. Catherine and Waelhem, ten miles from the temporary Belgian capital.

German officers are quoted as saying that they can take Antwerp whenever they get ready.

The official statement says:

"After bombarding Malines, four teen miles southeast of Antwerp, the Germans under cover of night, reentered the unoccupied town, but have now resumed their march therefrom."

"The Germans have directed the fire of their heavy artillery on the forts of Wavre, St. Catherine and Waelhem about ten miles from Antwerp, but with a result not justifying their great expenditure of ammunition. Our forts repelled, and the bombardment ceased."

"Between the Dendre and the Wille brook canal, west of Waelhem, the offensive movement of the enemy was promptly checked. The forts inflicted serious losses on the enemy and compelled his retreat."

The city of Alost has suffered considerably from artillery fire. The Belgian artillery was compelled to take up a position that allowed shells to drop in the city. In consequence fire started and a number of buildings were destroyed.

The Belgians claim to have silenced the German guns and compelled the Germans to retreat. (Alost has a population of nearly 35,000. It is about sixteen miles northwest of Brussels on the Dendre river. The old quarters of the town is more than 900 years old.)

During the fighting the burgomaster, although eighty years old, remained in the city.

"I must remain at my post," he said when friends and relatives urged him to seek safety. Although a shell fell in the garden of his residence he stayed on the veranda of his house, watching the battle. He wept at the sight of the battle's ravages.

AIR BOMB KILLS CHILDREN

Zeppelin Drops Explosives on Russian School House.

London, Sept. 30.—A Central News dispatch from Amsterdam says that further forays have been made by Zeppelin dirigible balloons.

Four bombs were dropped on the town of Deynse, nine miles southeast of Ghent, and two were thrown on Thiel, fifteen miles southeast of Brugge.

At the former place the convent of St. Vincent was badly damaged.

The operators of a German Zeppelin dirigible dropped a bomb into a schoolhouse at Bielefeld, Russia, according to a dispatch from Petrograd to the Morning Post. Eleven children were killed.

Paris Bomb Dropper Killed.

Bordeaux, Sept. 30.—The German aeroplane which flew over Paris on Sunday and dropped bombs, killing several persons, was fired upon and brought to earth near Montgeron, a few miles southwest of Paris, according to a telegram received here. The aviator was killed.

SAY PRINCE ADALBERT IS DEAD

Died in Brussels Hospital, From German Bullet, Physician Asserts.

Ghent, Sept. 30.—A Belgian doctor just out of Brussels, says that Prince Adalbert, the Kaiser's third son, died in a hospital there, and that Dr. Le page, King Albert's physician, was ordered to hold an autopsy in the presence of two German doctors. It was found, he says, that the prince had been killed by a German bullet, and that in other examinations officers were found to have died, too from wounds made by German bullets.

The man who told this was firmly convinced of the truth of his statement, but it should be accepted with reserve.

Sarajevo Bombarded.

Rome, Sept. 30.—An unconfirmed dispatch from Cetinje says that the Serbian and Montenegrin army before Sarajevo, capital of Bosnia, an Austrian province, has begun the bombardment of Sarajevo.

Sinks Four British Ships.

London, Sept. 30.—"The German cruiser Emden has sunk four British merchantmen in the Indian ocean and captured a collier. The crews of all are safe," says an official statement given out by the war department.

British Warships to Pacific.

Punta Arenas, Chile, Sept. 30.—The British cruisers Good Hope, Monmouth and Glasgow, under the command of Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, arrived here.

BOSTON WINS PENNANT

Victory Over Cubs and Giants' Defeat
Clinches Race.

Boston, Sept. 30.—The Boston Braves clinched the National League pennant by virtue of their victory over the Cubs and the Giants' defeat at the hands of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Braves won, 3 to 2, by a ninth inning rally, while the Pirates beat the Gants, 5 to 2.

The Braves now have a nine-game lead over the Giants. The Braves have nine games still to play; the Giants eight. If the Braves should lose all their remaining games and the Giants win all, Boston still would win.

GIRL IS MURDERED BY DRUNKEN UNCLE

Posse Seeks Slayer Who is Hiding in Hills.

Doylstown, Pa., Sept. 30.—Florence Cope, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Clinton Cope, who lives on the estate of the late Edward M. Paxson, at Buckington, was shot and almost instantly killed by her uncle, John Cope, who had threatened the life of the girl's mother.

Cope, who was intoxicated when he fired the shot, escaped from the house and has not been caught. Before he shot Miss Cope he had cursed Mrs. Cope and told her he intended to kill the entire family.

Although a posse of armed men and boys have scoured the woods about the farm where the crime was committed, no trace of the murderer beyond a few tracks in a nearby cornfield have been found.

Miss Cope was in bed when Cope entered the house and prepared to kill all the members of the family. When the young woman went downstairs she had been preceded by her mother, who was being threatened by Cope. Miss Cope tried to take the gun from her uncle and was shot.

Cattara Forts Destroyed.

Brindisi, Italy, Sept. 30.—The Anglo-French fleet in the Adriatic has resumed its bombardment of the Austrian port of Cattara. Two of the fortresses defending the city have been destroyed. An Austrian man-of-war is supposed to have been torpedoed by the Anglo-French fleet.

500 Rheims Citizens Killed.

Paris, Sept. 30.—More than 500 members of the civil population of the city of Rheims were killed during the bombardment of the city by the Germans. Official figures were compiled by the government and made public.

The executors of the estate of Mrs. Margaret E. S. Hood, benefactress of Hood College, Frederick, are again made defendants in a suit for claims. Miss Laura School seeks $6,000 for alleged services rendered Mrs. Hood during her lifetime. Thirty-nine witnesses have been summoned, and the case will probably be hard fought. HUMAN INTEREST ON GREAT

Best Stories Contained In Recent Despatches From the Front.

A GRAPHIC story sent from Ghent gives a clear idea of the horrors of war. It describes a ride in a Red Cross train taking mortally wounded soldiers who had been in the hospital at Malines to the hospital at Ghent.

"We had to take them out," explained the doctor, "because the shells were flying around the building."

We were standing in a longer car on the sides of which were two layers of shelves made of stretchers hung on steel arms. The engine was moving very slowly because, the doctor explained, there were some wounded soldiers on the train who shrieked with pain at every swaying motion of the cars.

We walked through the car and across the platforms to the next car. The doctor pointed his finger toward an upper stretcher in a corner.

"Dead," he said.

I looked and saw nothing but a sheet covering a form that swayed growlously.

"It's a soldier who was shot through the head. He was dying this afternoon," the doctor continued, "but we brought him along. I suppose moving has killed him, but what were we to do?"

He showed me another wounded soldier who was very nearly gone. There were great bandages about his chest.

"Shot through the lungs," explained the doctor.

"He Can't Live Anyhow!"

"Those nurses are trying to stop the pain for him and let him out easily. They'll probably give him too much, but he can't live anyhow."

When we reached Ghent two hours later there was a sheet over him. For him the greatest war in the history of the world had ended during the ride on the train.

The next ten cars of the train were piled with old men and women. Some of them were incredibly old and bent. They came from the home of old folks at Malines, and a nurse pointed out one woman who was more than 100 years old and who had been alive when Napoleon's conquest of Europe was slipping away from him. These old folks, who years before had quit their work and had found a quiet, peaceful corner in beautiful Malines in which to die, were being dragged away by the Red Cross to save from German shells the few short days of their ending lives.

Seeking a Place to Die.

We drew into Ghent late in the evening. Soldiers and nurses took the helpless humans from the cars and started them in automobiles and rigs of all sorts for the hospital. They lifted down the two white sheeted forms, and a black wagon took them away.

Even while this was being done and while the old folks waiting in wheel chairs were chattering like children about the Prussian war in 1870, the citizens of Ghent were crowding the depot trying to get away from the city because they had heard that the Germans were coming.

"There's panic everywhere," said a would be fugitive. "I can't find any place to live."

"And I can't find any place to die," chattered an old woman.

Shrapnel Bullets.

The wounded arriving at Bordeaux tell in every case the same story of shrapnel injuries. The proportion of bullet wounds is so very small that those suffering from them are almost curiosities.

A gunner described the effects of the shrapnel shells when the Germans get the range. He said that of the men working his battery not one escaped injury. This was near Soissons. The officer in charge had both his legs and an arm blown off. The sergeant had an eye torn out.

Seeing so many injured about him, the gunner began to feel as if he himself had suffered some injury, particularly as one of his feet felt numb. He discovered a big hole in his ankle, but felt no pain until he was taken to the field hospital. A shrapnel bullet struck one man near him in the hip and tore the leg open to the knee.

"Stick to the Last Point."

A Petrograd dispatch quotes a Russian officer:

"The Germans are just as brave as we. They stick to it to the last point. When captured they behave very correctly and to all questions answer, 'I have no information to give.'"

"Every one who can hold a gun is being pressed into the service against us. We know that by some dead they leave in the field—men in civilian attire and many sailors from their war ships. Children of fifteen and sixteen years, old men, occasionally even women, are fighting us."

"Awful Butchery."

A correspondent of the London Standard, stationed in Paris, sends as follows part of a letter which an English woman there received from her son at the front:

Device to Store Heat.

An inventor in Stockholm, Sweden, has devised an electrical apparatus for storing heat.

SIDE LIGHTS WAR IN EUROPE

Awfulness of the Modern Armed Conflicts Strikingly Portrayed.

here. We have been for eight days holding a village where at least 800 shells fall each day. We are in the thick of the horrors of war. The enemy occupies a ford, and we are told to dislodge him.

"Four days back we made a night sortie, and I assisted at the most awful butchery you can conceive. We made a bayonet charge in pitch darkness, talking to each other to keep in touch."

"The whole country is covered with dead horses and is a very charnel house."

War's Gentler Side.

"In the evening of Sedan day at Berlin," writes a correspondent, "a soldier in his war clothes of gray hobbled about Bismarck's statue before the reichstag building. His left leg was entirely stiff, bandaged, I suppose. His girl was with him; and how all adored him! Fingers, hands and arms were locked, and her eyes never left her hero's face."

"He was well fed, pink cheeked, good looking, and she was poor (judging from her clothes), sallow, short and shrunken looking. She ran over her worn shoes badly, but how happy she was in her adoration; how ecstatic! He was her man; he was safe back from the wars (for the present), and he was a hero, a wounded hero, who twined his fingers with hers before the statue of Victory in the Sieges Allee. I suppose the girl doesn't touch very high spots in her life, but one she surely touched on the afternoon of Sedan day of 1914."

Psychology of a Soldier.

The Paris Temps gives excerpts from a letter of a French cavalry officer which throws an interesting light on the psychology of civilized Europe in warfare. He says:

"One must develop a new mentality suitable to the circumstances. War is barbarous. We cook a meal on wood splinters like savages. One must assume savage habits throughout. I have become quite a different man and live without trying to understand why or how. When I have five minutes I sleep, no matter where. When I find water of which I'm sure I drink. When I know tomorrow has arrived I finish today. I believe nothing I'm told."

"Naturally we never know before-hand if we are staying or going to move. Orders arrive, and we execute them with no idea of the general plan. As for the battle, it is just an infernal noise, with the officers bearing orders at a gallop—that's my job—shells bursting all around, but so numerous one doesn't notice them. Even the horses cease to flinch, which shows it's habit, not heroism that keeps one calm. One ceases to think because thinking tires and therefore is too much physician's exhaustion. One accepts what comes. It is just luck. In five days' fighting I never saw a single German. Our infantry say the same. We never see them. We only find their dead."

Children War Aides.

The war has called into being a remarkable organization, literally a "children's crusade," for in every school house throughout Great Britain the children are being enrolled "for the war," as Earl Kitchener's call for volunteers reads, in the newly formed League of Young Patriots. Queen Mary herself has intimated her full sympathy with the objects of the league and, moreover, has given her consent to the Princess Mary's becoming patron of the league.

Each boy and girl who becomes a young patriot is required to make and fulfill two simple promises:

First—To God and king and country I will do my duty.

Second—To those in difficulty or sorrow through the war I will give my best help.

And these are the rules they must keep every day:

First—Wear the badge of the league.

Second—Ask daily for a blessing on their country and a speedy end of strife.

Third—Show special kindness and helpfulness to those in need and trouble.

The badge of the league consists of a white cross on a red ground the famous Red Cross emblem reversed.

The plan of campaign for the school children "crusaders" is outlined in the Teachers' World, the official organ of the league.

Dangerous Sentry Duty.

"This sentry duty, which goes on all along the line, is a most amazing and most dangerous business," writes a correspondent at the front. "On one night Belgian and German sentries could see each other at a distance of 300 yards, and twice it was told of cases where the men exchanged threats and shook their fists at each other. Sometimes it is more serious. The threats are carried out."

Aviator In a Rain of Shells.

Probably no more thrilling spectacle has ever been seen by mortal, says a correspondent describing a duel in the air between a French aviator in a biplane and German artillery posted on the ridge commanding the city of Soissons.

The aviator was ordered to ascend, carrying an officer assigned to locate the exact position of the German guns which it was desired to silence. I was able to follow his every movement through a pair of powerful field glasses.

As I watched the air craft swing and turn through the small clouds I realized that the aviator was literally playing hide and seek with death. The shells were bursting near him, but he was always on the alert. The biplane would suddenly surge almost directly upward, then describe a giant spiral, then drop far down, and always the movement came in the very nick of time to spoil the range of the German artillerymen, who were serving their guns with remarkable precision.

The shells were constantly bursting all about the plane, and it was only by the exercise of all of his skill that the pilot was able to keep his machine unscathed. He swung far across the German lines and discovered that the German artillery was posted in a rock quarry, in what was practically an impregnable position, with the guns masked and mounted so that they commanded the entire British-French positions.

The aviator, after reporting to the commanding officer, went up again and passed through the same ordeal. This time, however, he was giving the range to the French artillerymen, who had brought up their powerful three inch guns and posted them advantageously. The Germans were simply showered with explosive shells and shrapnel until they were finally compelled to slacken their fire, although they did not abandon their position.

Oddities In the War News.

Colonel Rousset reports that the death of so many French officers is due to the gold lace and stripes on their uniforms, which makes them good targets for the enemy.

A Russian soldier, called before the commanding officer to be publicly praised for rescuing wounded under fire, was discovered to be a woman. She was permitted to continue serving as a volunteer.

Society women in London go out on the streets and accost every man they meet to enlist in the war for their king. When a man's reply is unfavorable to enlistment the women stick a white feather in his hat.

A German prisoner, recaptured twenty days after he escaped from Bordeaux, said he had lived in the open air on raw snails and raisins.

When a British raw recruit failed to salute a superior officer he was given a long lecture on military regulations. Then the officer said, "By the way, to what company do you belong?"

"The Wigan Coal and Iron company," was the prompt response.

The Kaiser carries in the pocket of his greatcoat a four leaved clover, pressed and scented, for luck. It was carried by his grandfather forty-four years ago. It was given to King William by a little girl, and after Sedan he restored it to her, saying it had brought him victory. It was recently sent the Kaiser by the Countess Dehna, who had treasured it many years.

CANS FULL OF MOSQUITOES.

Punch Holes In Discarded Receptacles and Stop Malaria, Doctor Suggests.

Punch holes in the bottom of tin cans and prevent malaria. This is a suggestion for the destruction of mosquito breeding places contained in an article on "Mosquito Malaria" in the New York weekly public health service report.

Mosquitoes, the report says, are the only known agents for the transmission of malaria. Dr. Charles Wardell, professor of zoology in the public health service, made a trip of investigation into the subject of mosquitoes and malaria through a state where there was much malaria and found mosquito larvae by thousands in empty tin cans that had been thrown into boxes or on to trash heaps and in which rainwater had collected. The writer points out what a simple health measure it would have been for a person who opens and empties cans to punch a hole or two in the bottom of each.

Tin buckets that had contained paint, glass bottles, kegs, barrels, water tight boxes and in one case an old iron safe, door side up, all furnished their quota of mosquitoes to add to the prevailing illness.

NEW RECIPE FOR KISSING.

"Safety First" the Object of Physician's Sanitary Suggestion.

At the fifth annual convention of the Pennsylvania Homeopathic Medical society, held at Wernersville, Pa., Dr. William F. Snow, secretary of the American Social Hygiene association gave this recipe for kissing:

Cut out a square of tissue paper. Subject it to a bath in a sanitary solution.

Place over the mouth.

Then:

Kiss.

But don't wear out the paper or break through.

These precautions, Dr. Snow said, would make kissing safe. There was a suggestion that throwing kisses might be safer.

Women Shopkeepers' War Plea.

"My husband has gone into the war." Signs with these or similar words are displayed in many store windows in Berlin. They are a silent appeal to housewives to assist the wife of the soldier in continuing the business, and it seems as if these appeals find ready response.

As the World Looks at It.

The man who suffers in silence may be heroic, but the man who "makes a holler" seems more sociable and is therefore more popular.

FOR THE HOME DINNER.

DINNER MENU.
Potato Chowder.
Browned Potatoes.
Neapolitan Veal Cutlet.
Parsnips Parisienne.
Combination Salad.
Brown Bread.
Apple Pudding.
Coffee.

A SIMPLE yet tempting dinner menu is the following:

Potato Chowder.—Take six large potatoes, pare and slice thinly. Chop one onion and two large slices of bacon. Fry the bacon and onion together, using care that they do not brown. Put a layer of the potatoes in a baking dish. Cover with the onion and bacon, a little minced parsley, salt and pepper. Add the rest of potatoes. Then cover with a pint of milk in which has been stirred one tablespoonful of flour rubbed well with one tablespoonful of butter. Cover the baking dish and cook one-half hour.

Neapolitan Veal Cutlet.—Take two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and one scant tablespoonful of lard. Place in a frying pan, and when hot put in one good sized onion and two cloves of garlic, both chopped, and brown slightly. Push them back to the side of the pan and put into the hot pan the cutlet slightly beaten. Brown it on both sides, and when brown add half a can of tomatoes and seasoning as follows: Salt, pepper, one saltspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful sugar. Let simmer two hours. Serve on a hot dish garnished with sprigs of fresh parsley.

Parsnips Parisienne.—Take three or four parsnips, the juice of a lemon, one egg, some breadcrumbs and one table spoonful of chopped parsley. Peel and wash the parsnips and, if large, cut in half. Cook in plenty of boiling water containing a little salt and lemon juice. When tender take out and drain, brush with well beaten egg. Roll in crumbs and put on greased baking pan in a hot oven to brown quickly, sprinkling with the parsley. Serve in a pyramid with melted butter sauce.

Apple Pudding.—Stew apples that have been pared, cored and quartered until they are a pulp; beat and add to every pint of pulp a half cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of butter, one half cupful of breadcrumbs and three eggs, well beaten separately. Bake one-half hour. Serve with cream, though the pudding is good by itself with a little powdered sugar sifted over the top. A pint of pulp is the foundation of a pudding for four persons.

List of Nominations and Vote Totals in Great Circulation Campaign of the Times and News will Appear in a Few Days.

In a few days the list of nominations that have been sent in for the Times and News Circulation Campaign, will be published. With each nomination that is received there are always some of the ten vote coupons and these will be credited to each contestant on the first day's publication.

Now the publication of the first list of nominations in this great contest is anxiously awaited by the readers of both papers. They are anxious to see who have sent in their names and to know who are going to take advantage of this wonderful opportunity.

If your name is not on this list you should get it there at once. Just think what it will mean to you and how easily possible it is for you to turn your leisure time into good profit for the next few weeks. And, if you are considering entering this race at all, now is the time to make up your mind and to send in your name. Get it on the very first list so that all of your friends will know that you are in the race and they will then save their votes and subscriptions for you until you can get time to go after them.

And if, when the first list appears, you find that your name has been sent in by some of your friends, do not delay longer. You will know that there are some people interested in you and that they are willing to help you win one of the prizes. That means that you have a very good chance to do so if you are willing to take up the work yourself and give these people encouragement to help you.

The contest is just starting. The field is still untouched and every one entering has the same opportunity. There are eight beautiful prizes to be offered and you have just as good a chance of winning one of them as anyone in the race. And better still, each one enters with the assurance that they cannot lose as they are absolutely protected from that by the ten per cent. cash commission.

No matter what you may do or how little spare time you seem to have this contest is well worthy of consideration. Call at The Times office and go over the plan of campaign with the manager and he will explain all details to you and help you to decide whether or not to enter.

Rules of the Contest.

Any white man or woman, married or single, of good character and residing in this section of Pennsylvania, may become a candidate. Votes once issued cannot be transferred. Neither can votes be bought. They must be secured on subscriptions or by ballots clipped from the paper.

Candidates are not confined to their own districts in securing votes, but may secure subscriptions anywhere in the United States.

Candidates can have anyone anywhere work for them.

Candidates compete only against candidates in their own district for the district prizes, but all have an equal chance to win any of the grand prizes.

In the event of a tie, prizes of equal value will be given the candidates polling the tie vote.

The nomination blank counts 5,000 votes for the candidate so nominated and only the first nomination blank will be accepted for any one candidate.

The Campaign Manager reserves the right to reject any nominations and to make any and all rulings which may be necessary for the best interests of the contest and the contestants.

Any questions or disputes that may arise during the contest will be decided by the Campaign Manager.

All votes issued on subscriptions will be good until the close of the contest and will be polled at the discretion of the candidate or subscriber.

Cash must accompany all subscriptions where votes are issued.

Read over carefully the section referring to districts, determine which one you are in and send in your name on the nomination coupon or by letter.

Persons who enter and take part in this contest will, thereby, bind themselves to abide by the foregoing rules.

The decision as to the winners will be made at the close of the contest by a committee of well known business men.

CHAPTER IV.

Captive or Runaway.

At the age of twenty-six Donald Abbott had become a prosperous and distinguished painter in water colors. His work was individual, and at the same time it was delicate and charming. One saw his Italian landscapes as through a filmy gauze; the almond blossoms of Sicily, the rose-laden walls of Florence, the vineyards of Chianti, the poppy-glowing Campagna out of Rome. His Italian lakes had brought him fame. He knew very little of the grind and hunger that attended the careers of his whimsical associates. His father had left him some valuable patents—wash-tubs, carpet-cleaners and other labor-saving devices—and the royalties from these were quite sufficient to keep him pleasantly housed.

His earnings (not inconsiderable, for tourists found much to admire in both the pictures and the artist) he spent in gratifying his mild extravagances. So there were no lines in his handsome, boyish, beardless face; and his eyes were unusually clear and happy. Perhaps once or twice, since his majority, he had returned to America to prove that he was not an expatriate, though certainly he was one, the only one existing between him and his native land being the bankers who regularly honored his drafts. And who shall condemn him for preferring Italy to the desolate center of New York state, where good servants and good weather are as rare as are flawless emeralds?

Half after three, on Wednesday afternoon, Abbott stared moodily at the weather-tarnished group by Dalou in the Luxembourg gardens—the Triumph of Silenus. His gaze was deceptive, for the rollicking old bibulous scoundrel had not stirred his critical sense nor impressed the delicate films of thought. He was looking through the bronze, into the far-away things. He had arrived early that morning, all the way from Como, to find a thunder bolt driven in at his feet. Across his knees fluttered an open newspaper, the Paris edition of the New York Herald. All that kept him from blowing away was the tense if sprawling fingers of his right hand; his left hung limply at his side.

It was not possible. Such things did not happen these unromantic days to unusual celebrities. She had written that on Monday night she would sing in La Boheme and on Wednesday, Faust. She had since vanished, vanished as completely as though she had taken wings and flown away. It was unreal. She had left the apartment in the Avenue de Wagram on Saturday afternoon, and nothing had been heard of her since. At the last moment they had had to find a substitute for her part in the Puccini opera. The maid testified that her mistress had gone on an errand of mercy. She had not mentioned where, but she had said that she would return in time to dress for dinner, which proved conclusively that something out of the ordinary had befallen her.

The automobile that had carried her away had not been her own, and the chauffeur was unknown. None of the directors at the opera had been notified of any change in the singer's plans. She had disappeared, and they were deeply concerned. Singers were generally erratic, full of sudden indispositions, unaccountable whims; but the Signorina da Toscana was one in a thousand. She never broke an engagement. If she was ill she said so at once; she never left them in doubt until the last moment. Indecision was not one of her characteristics. She was as reliable as the sun. If the directors did not hear definitely from her by noon today, they would have to find another Marguerite.

The police began to move, and they stirred up some curious bits of information. A man had tried to bribe the singer's chauffeur, while she was singing at the Austrian ambassador's. The chauffeur was able to describe the stranger with some accuracy. Then came the bewildering episode in the apartment; the pistol-shot, the flight of the man, the astonished concierge to whom the beautiful American would offer no explanations. The man (who tallied with the description given by the chauffeur) had obtained entrance under false representations. He claimed to be an emissary with important instructions from the opera. There was nothing unusual in this; messengers came at all hours, and seldom the same one twice; so the concierge's suspicions had not been aroused. Another item. A tall hand some Italian had called at eleven o'clock Saturday morning, but the signorina had sent down word that she could not see him. The maid recalled that her mistress had intended to dine that night with the Italian gentleman. His name she did not know, having been with the signorina but two weeks.

Celeste Fournier, the celebrated young pianist and composer, who shared the apartment with the missing prima donna, stated that she hadn't the slightest idea where her friend was. She was certain that misfortune had overtaken her in some inexplicable manner. To implicate the Italian was out of the question. He was well-known to them both. He had arrived again at seven, Saturday, and was very much surprised that the signorina had not yet returned. He had waited till nine, when he left, greatly disappointed. He was the Barone di Monte-Verdi in Canada, formerly military attaché at the Italian embassy in Berlin. Sunday noon Mademoiselle Fournier had notified the authorities. She did not know, but she felt sure that the blond stranger knew more than anyone else. And here was the end of things. The police found themselves at a standstill. They searched the hotels but without success; the blond stranger could not be found.

Abbott's eyes were not happy and pleasant just now. They were dull and blank with the reaction of the stunning blow. He, too, was certain of the Barone. Much as he secretly hated the Italian, he knew him to be a fearless and an honorable man. But who could this blond stranger be who appeared so sinisterly in the two scenes? From where had he come? Why had Nora refused to explain about the pistol-shot? Any woman had a perfect right to shoot a man who forced his way into her apartment. Was he one of those mad fools who had fallen in love with her, and had become desperate? Or was it some one she knew and against whom she did not wish to bring any charges? Abducted! And she might be at this very moment, suffering all sorts of indignities. It was horrible to be so helpless.

"Leave the Room, or I Will Shoot."

The sparkle of the sunlight upon the ferrule of a cane, extending over his shoulder, broke in on his agonizing thoughts. He turned, an angry word on the tip of his tongue. He expected to see some tourist who wanted to be informed.

"Ted Courtlandt!" He jumped up, overturning the stool. "And where the dickens did you come from? I thought you were in the Orient?"

"Just got back, Abby."

The two shook hands and eyed each other with the appraising scrutiny of friends of long standing.

"You don't change any," said Abbott.

"Nor do you. I've been standing behind you fully two minutes. What were you glooming about? Old Silenus offend you?"

"Have you read the Herald this morning?"

"I never read it nowadays. They are always giving me a roast of some kind. Whatever I do they are bound to misconstrue it." Courtlandt stooped and righted the stool, but sat down on the grass, his feet in the path. "What's the trouble? Have they been after you?"

Abbott rescued the offending paper and shaking it under his friend's nose, said: "Read that."

Courtlandt's eyes widened considerably as they absorbed the significance of the heading—"Eleonora da Toscana missing."

"Bah!" he exclaimed.

"You say bah?"

"It looks like one of their advertising dodges. I know something about singers," Courtlandt added. "I engineered a musical comedy once."

"You do not know anything about her," cried Abbott hotly.

"That's true enough," Courtlandt finished the article, folded the paper and returned it, and began digging in the path with his cane.

"But what I want to know is, who the devil is this mysterious blond stranger?" Abbott flourished the paper again. "I tell you, it's no advertising dodge. She's been abducted. The blond!"

Courtlandt ceased boring into the earth. "The story says that she refused to explain this blond chap's presence in her room. What do you make of that?"

"Perhaps you think the fellow was her press agent?" was the retort.

"Lord, no! But it proves that she knew him, that she did not want the police to find him. At least, not at that moment. Who's the Italian?" suddenly.

"I can vouch for him. He is a gentleman, honorable as the day is long, even if he is hot-headed at times. Count him out of it. It's this unknown fellow who annoys me for some reason."

"How long have you known her?" asked Courtlandt presently.

"About two years. She's the gem of the whole lot. Gentle, kindly, untouchable by flattery. Why, you must have seen and heard her!"

"I have," Courtlandt stared into the hole he had dug. "Voice like an angel's with a face like Bellini's donna; and Irish all over. But for all that, you will find that her disappearance will turn out to be a diva's whim. Hang it, Sids, I've had some experience with singers."

"You are a blockhead!" exploded the younger man.

"All right, I am," Courtlandt laughed. "Come on over to the Souflet and have a drink with me."

"I'm not drinking today," tersely. "There's too much ahead for me to do."

"Going to start out to find her? Oh, Sir Galahad!" ironically. "Abby, you used to be a sport. I'll wager a hundred against a bottle of pop that to-morrow or next day she'll turn up serenely, with a statement that she was indisposed, sorry not to have notified the directors, and all that. They do it repeatedly every season."

"But an errand of mercy, the strange automobile which cannot be found? The engagement to dine with the baron? Celeste Fournier's statement? You can't get around these things. I tell you, Nora isn't that kind. She's too big in heart and mind to stoop to any such devices," vehemently.

"Nora! That looks pretty serious. Abby. You haven't gone and made a fool of yourself, have you?"

"What do you call making a fool of myself?" truculently.

"You aren't a suitor, are you? An accepted suitor?" unruffled, rather kindly.

"No, but I would to heaven that I were!" Abbott jammed the newspaper into his pocket and slung the stool over his arm. "Come on over to the studio until I get some money."

"You are really going to start a search?"

"I really am. I'd start one just as quickly for you, if I heard that you had vanished under mysterious circumstances."

"I believe you honestly would."

"You are an old misanthrope. I hope some woman puts the hook into you some day. Where did you pick up the grouch? Some of your dusky princesses give you the go-by?"

"You, too, Abby?"

"Oh, pot! Of course I never believed any of that twaddle. Only, I've got a sore head today. If you knew Nora as well as I do, you'd understand."

Courtlandt continued toward the exit, his head forward, his gaze bent on the path. He had the air of a man deep in thought, philosophic thought, which leaves the brows unmarred by those corrugations known as frowns. Yet his thoughts were far from philosophic. Indeed, his soul was in mad turmoil. He could have thrown his arms toward the blue sky and cursed aloud the fates that had set this new tangle at his feet. He longed for the jungles and some mad beast to vent his wrath upon. But he gave no sign. He had returned with a purpose as hard and grim as iron, and no obstacle, less powerful than death, should divert or control him. Abduction? Let the public believe what it might; he held the key to the mystery. She was afraid, and had taken flight. So be it.

"I say, Ted," called out the artist, "what did you mean by saying that you were a Dutchman?"

Courtlandt paused so that Abbott might catch up to him. "I said that I was a Dutchman?"

"Yes. And it has just occurred to me that you meant something."

"Oh, yes. You were talking of Da Toscana? Let's call her Harrigan. It to whom we refer. You said she was Irish, and that when she said a thing she meant it. My boy, the Irish are notorious for claiming that. They often say it before they see clearly. Now, we Dutchmen—it takes a long time for us to make up our minds, but when we do, something has got to bend or break."

"You don't mean to say that you are going to settle down and get married, if that will ease your mind any?"

"Man, I was hoping!"

"Three meals a day in the same house, with the same woman, never appealed to me."

"What do you want, one for each meal?"

"There's the dusky princess peeking out again. The truth is, Abby, if I could hide myself for three or four years, long enough for people to forget me, I might reconsider. But it should be under another name. They envy us millionaires. Why, we are the loneliest of creatures going. We distrust every one; we fly when a woman approaches; we become monomaniacs; one thing obsesses us, everybody is after our money. We want friends, we want wives, but we want them to be attracted to us and not to our money-bags. Oh, pshaw! What plans have you made in regard to the search?"

The Universal Language.

The one universal language is not Esperanto, but music. Everywhere the same musical score is played. The masters of different countries may have characteristic national qualities, but music-lovers everywhere find delight in a composition, it matters not from what land or clime the composer hails. Whether played in Germany or Italy or France or at home, your favorite music sounds the same.—Leslie's Weekly.

Foolish to Skimp on Sleep.

It takes from seven to eight hours of sleep for adults to permit the system to scour out the clogging poisons. To skimp on necessary sleep is as bad for efficiency as it would be to allow grit to accumulate in the bearings of an engine—and for the same mechanical reason.

Statue Erected to Cat Tribe.

In memory of the countless cats which have been slaughtered since the invention of the samisen, or three-stringed Japanese guitar, which has cats' skin as one of its principal materials, a number of Japanese philanthropists have caused a tomb, in the form of a cat's statue, to be erected in Tokyo.

Many Sought Position.

The French poor law department recently advertised for ten inspectors to call at Paris theaters and check the receipts so as to make sure that the taxes due to the department were correctly calculated.—The number of applications for these posts was 7,126.

Can't Help It.

Have You Catarrh?

It's a Dangerous Disease—Hyomei is the Effective Remedy.

Catarrh, which is indicated by sniffing, frequent coids and crusts in the nose is a serious disease and if not checked surely spreads to the delicate linings of the air passages, and frequently destroys the hearing. To cure catarrh you must have something that will quickly reach the diseased tissues, kill the germs, and drive out the poison.

Hyomei is just such a remedy. Being a mixture of antiseptic oils that you breathe through a small inhaler its health-restoring medication cannot help going direct to the raw and inflamed lining of the nose and throat, quickly relieving that choked-up feeling, stopping the unpleasant discharges, and healing the sore spots—you breathe freely. Even the worst cases respond at once.

There is nothing for the patient of catarrh that is easier, more pleasant or so satisfying as Hyomei. People's Drug Store sells it on the "No-cure-no-pay" plan.

CALDERON WON'T RULE IN MEXICO

Villa's Choice For Presidency Won't Accept.

SAYS PEOPLE MUST CHOOSE

Wilson and Cabinet Discuss the Situation and Have Strong Hopes For Peace.

Mexico City, Sept. 30. — Fernando Iglesias Calderon declined to accept the presidency of Mexico. He stated that he would not accept the office imposed by a single military group, and added that the selection of provisional president was properly the function of the convention in which all the elements of the republic should be equitably represented.

Calderon is the man for whom General Villa insisted Carranza should withdraw.

Cabinet Expects Peace.

Washington, Sept. 30. — President Wilson and his cabinet took up the question of bringing the American troops back from Vera Cruz.

It is understood that the whole Mexican situation was canvassed and at attitude of strict neutrality on the part of this government toward the new situation in the republic was determined.

It is admitted that while theoretically the Carranza-Villa break will no change the plans of the administration to evacuate Vera Cruz, it may likely result in delaying the actual withdrawal.

Prospects for peace in Mexico were brighter, in the view of the administration officials, because of the formal announcement from General Villa that he would not be a candidate for president or vice president.

This dispatch, which came to the state department from Consul Carrothers, at Chihuahua City, doubled the hopes that the differences would be adjusted satisfactorily at the conference to be held at Zacatecas on Thursday.

Carranza Will Hold Office.

Mexico City, Sept. 30.—Despite the demands of General Villa and Villa's generals that Venustiano Carranza resign, the indications were that Carranza would remain in the national palace at least until the convention of Constitutionalists generals or their delegates is held in Mexico City next month.

General Carranza believes that no other action on his part would be consistent with the "Guadalupe agreement," of which Villa is one of the signers.

Military preparations are still going forward, and General Carranza now has a strong army in the field to oppose General Villa.

Carranza Moves on Sonora.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 30.—A brigade from Manzanillo has been ordered to Guaymas to participate in the Sonora campaign, according to a message from General Hill, the Carranza commander at Naco.

This force has been instructed to co-operate with the force of 10,000 men under General Iturbide, which is supposed to be moving from Sanalaoa.

U. S. FINAL ARBITER

English Officials Expect This Country to Make Peace.

London, Sept. 30.—Since President Wilson made his statement that peace overtures were premature at the time English officials have felt reassured and they now express confidence that the United States will, at the proper time, exert its good offices to bring the way to a close under conditions insuring a permanent peace in Europe.

High officials expressed confidence that the United States, after the continental combatants had become somewhat exhausted by the struggle would exert a powerful influence for peace and make it possible to negotiate a treaty which would require European nations to submit their future differences to the United States for arbitration, thus making a recurrence of the war impossible.

Motor Crash Kills Two.

Williamsport, Pa., Sept. 30. — Mrs. William Howard, wife of an Emporium lumber leader, died in the City hospital here from injuries received in an automobile accident. Mrs. Josiah Howard, wife of a Cameron county assemblyman, died in the institution from injuries received in the same accident. The machine in which the women were riding skidded and plunged over a forty-foot embankment.

Drys Gain in Kentucky.

Louisville, Ky., Sept. 30.—Only four teen of the 120 counties of Kentucky are in the "wet" column as the result of Monday's local option election in which nine more counties went "dry." Counties voting to abolish the saloon were: Carroll, Montgomery, Mason, Bell, Boone, Clark, Shelby, Bourbon and Scott. Three counties, Davis, McCracken and Christian, voted to retain bars.

RUSSIA DRIVES BACK GERMANS IN POLAND

Ossowetz Resists the Kaiser's Heavy Siege Guns.

Petrograd, Sept. 30.—The following official communication from the chief of the general staff regarding the Russian operations has been given out:

"Russian troops are driving fast on the offensive in the forests of Augustowo, in Russian Poland, province of Suwalki.

"The Germans are using heavy siege artillery in the bombardment of the fortress of Ossowetz. An attempt by the German infantry to close in on the fortress has been checked.

"On the front of Silesia the enemy has been greatly reinforced and shows much activity.

"Sorties by the garrison of Przemyśl have not been successful.

"At Tsarkoye-Selo, on Sept. 28, the emperor received delegates from the Petrograd banks, who placed at his disposal one million rubles ($500,000) for the necessities of war, and another million for the organization of a hospital service and to aid the families of soldiers at the front. The Empress Alexandra and the Dowager Empress Maria Feodorovna were present at the audience.

The invasion of Hungary continues.

German attacks on the Niemen and Bobry rivers, in northwest Russia, strengthen the belief, inspired by the news of the German railways to the Baltic ports being closed for traffic to the public, that a descent on the Russian coast is planned.

BELIEVE FACTORY DYNAMITED

Dye Works at Reading Destroyed When About to Reopen.

Reading, Pa., Sept. 30.—Investigation of the destruction of the plant of the Reichart Dyeing company at Hyde Park, a suburb, leads to the belief that the plant was dynamited.

There were five explosions and the machinery was so badly wrecked that it is considered impossible that it was due to the heat of the fire which followed.

The loss is $15,000. The plant had been closed for a month and was to have resumed this week.

Says Crown Prince Looted.

Paris, Sept. 30.—Baroness De Baye, chateleine of the Chateau De Baye, near Champaubert, who has fled here from her home, declared that the crown prince had personally superintended the looting of the chateau.

Oratory.

Speaking of Wendell Phillips' remarkable gifts as an orator, Horace Greeley paid him the highest compliment when he said that there wasn't a boy who heard Phillips speak but thought he could speak as well—he spoke so naturally. Of the great actor Garrick it is related that he did not please country people or others unused to the stage because he was so natural that he did not seem to be acting at all.

Animal Scent.

A fox can scent a man half a mile away if the wind be blowing in the animal's direction. A mouse can smell cheese fifty feet away. A deer may be sound asleep, and yet he will catch the scent of a person passing 200 feet off. The rabbit depends more upon his ears than his nose.

Never Questioned

Royal Baking Powder is absolutely pure and wholesome. It is made from highly refined, pure, cream of tartar, an ingredient of grapes. Not an atom of unwholesomeness goes into it; not an unwholesome influence comes from it. It perfectly leavens the food, makes it finer in appearance, more delicious to the taste, more healthful.

Its superiority in all the qualities that make the perfect baking powder is never questioned.

To sweeten rancid butter melt the butter, skim it, then place a piece of light brown toast in it, and in a few minutes the toast will have absorbed the unpleasant taste and smell.

To clean all kinds of baking tins and cake dishes and pans make enough strong lime-water to cover the dishes and let them boil in it for ten minutes. When taken out they should be as bright and clean as new tins.

Uses For Embroidery Cotton.

Embroidery cotton, the soft finished sort, is right for darning table linen, which is difficult to mend with twisted sewing cotton. The same kind of embroidery cotton is often a convenience for darning fine colored stockings; it is not always possible to match the fancy colors now worn with ordinary darning cotton. Another use for the soft twisted embroidery cotton is to make buttonholes in cotton or linen garments. One gets a better effect than with sewing cotton and the work is more quickly done.

Eggs, Spanish Style.

Cook two cupfuls of raw tomatoes with a chopped up sweet pepper, frying the two in a tablespoonful of butter. Add paprika, salt and a teaspoonful of finely minced chives and reduce to half the quantity, which will take about ten or fifteen minutes. Toast slices of white bread, put poached eggs on top and pour over the tomato and pepper sauce. Serve at once. Chopped onion may be substituted for the chives.

Cucumber Pickles.

Wash the cucumbers in cold water, wipe dry and place in jars with alternate layers of green peppers and horseradish sliced thin. To one gallon of vinegar add one teaspoonful of salt, one of sugar, quarter of a pound of white mustard seed and the same amount of black pepper, together with a lump of alum the size of a walnut. Boil this mixture and pour over the cucumbers hot on three successive days.

Pumpkin Pie.

To two cupfuls boiled and strained pumpkin add three-quarters cupful sugar, two well beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls molasses, one tablespoonful melted butter, one-half teaspoonful each ginger and cinnamon, small pinch of salt and two cupfuls milk. This is enough for two pies.

Both Bad.

"Is there anything worse than owing money you can't pay?"
"Yes; being owed money you can't collect."—Boston Transcript.

Mystery of the Stomach.

"Why does not the stomach digest itself?" is a question often asked. The Journal of the American Medical Association confesses that the reason has not yet been found. There are many theories, but not one of them is entirely satisfactory, and we are still unable to say more than Hunter said more than a century ago. "That these living cells remain intact under such circumstances because they are alive."—New York World.

Honesty the Best Policy.

Doubtless the sorest man in the United States today is the fellow who dropped his purse, containing $80, while he was robbing a chicken coop and who is afraid to claim his property. Verily, honesty is the best policy.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Something Learned.

Farmer Clapole—Has that city fellow who bought Stone's farm learned anything yet? Farmer Sands—Wall, he's learnt it don't do no good ter try ter make apple butter in a churn.—Judge.

Sheep and Wild Onions.

On pastures and lawns sheep are a satisfactory means of getting rid of the wild onion pest. During the winter and early spring, when there is little other vegetation, the sheep will eat the onion tops, preventing the maturing of the bulbs. If the onions are salted the sheep show an increased fondness for them, otherwise they will avoid the weed when there is an abundance of other food. In fields where there are only a few plants and sheep cannot be utilized the most feasible method is to dig up the plants with a mattock. The entire clump can be taken up by the roots and carried off to a place where it can give no more trouble. Four thumbfuls of coal tar creosote oil put on a plant will kill the underground bulbs, but this method does not seem to be as satisfactory as the mattock.

A Missing Man.

"What has become of the old fashioned man," asks the Cincinnati Enquirer, "who used to wear a yard of crape on his hat?" Perhaps he's married again.—Toledo Blade.

Have Dark Hair

and Look Young

Nobody can Tell when you
Darken Gray, Faded Hair
with Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and abundant with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur.
Whenever her hair fell out or took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, ready to use, for about 50 cents. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is splendid for dandruff, dry, itchy scalp and falling hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and abundant.

Fraulein Becker's Ruse

By F. A. MITCHEL

Fraulein Anna Becker was sitting in her boudoir in Berlin embroidering when, looking out through the window, she saw a wasp waisted lieutenant stop at her door. There was something in his manner which was very serious and indicated that he was calling on important business. She had never seen him before, but her brother Carl was an army officer, and she knew that the stranger called on some business for him. Presently a maid brought in a card bearing the name of Herman Borgesser for Lieutenant Carl Becker. Fraulein Anna went to receive Herr Borgesser and told him that her brother was not at home. She would be happy to deliver any message Herr Lieutenant had for him.

"Will you kindly give your brother my card?" he said.

"Anything for him to do?"

"He will understand."

"Are you sure? Is there not something that will make his understanding the matter sure?"

Herr Lieutenant glanced at the celling for inspiration.

"You might say, fraulein, that it concerns an occurrence last night at the officers' quarters."

"With whom?"

"Captain Koch."

"I will give him the message with pleasure," said the young lady, and Herr Lieutenant marched away congratulating himself that he had acquitted himself with great discretion.

Fraulein Anna had learned from him all she wished to know, which was that her brother, a hot headed youth who was bitterly opposed to her engagement with Captain Koch, had picked a quarrel with him, had insulted him and the visitor had brought a challenge from the latter.

Fraulein's first act was to send her brother away on a fool's errand by sending him a telegram with his sweetheart's name attached, saying that she must see him at once. But since the sweetheart lived fifty miles from Berlin Lieutenant Becker must necessarily be away some time. The second move was to send word in her brother's name that he would meet Captain Koch the next morning at 5 o'clock at a certain place where duels between army officers were usually fought.

Now, though Anna Becker's features were not very like those of her brother, her height and weight were nearly the same. That evening, dressed in one of his uniforms and with a dozen of his cards in her card case, she sailed forth to put in practice a certain plan she had conceived. Entering a restaurant, she ordered a dinner with a bottle of wine. Presently she arose and threw the contents of her glass in the face of a quiet looking gentleman sitting near her.

"What does this mean?" he asked.

"It means that you stared at me in an insulting manner," replied Anna, and, throwing her brother's card on a

Two hours later when Anna returned to her home she had insulted six persons, and between 9 o'clock and midnight four challenges came in from different persons for Lieutenant Becker.
Two of them from army officers, all of whom fraulein agreed to meet the next morning at the time and place she had agreed that her brother should meet her lover.

When midnight came and Carl did not return Fraulein Anna felt sure that her ruse to get him out of the way had been successful. But it had only been partly so. When Lieutenant Borgesser returned to Captain Koch and reported what he had done the captain sent him out to find Becker himself.
He came upon Becker in the billiard room of the officers' club just as he was reading the dispatch from his sweetheart that had been sent him by Anna. Consulting a time table, he found he could keep both appointments and agreed to meet Captain Koch at 6 o'clock the next morning at the usual place for the settlement of affairs of honor among officers of the army.

Koch noticed a discrepancy in the time of meeting between the written and verbal reply to his challenge, but thought little of it, though, that he might surely be on hand for the fray, he went to the ground at 5 o'clock. A quarter of an hour later a gentleman, with attendants, appeared and informed the captain that he had come to meet Lieutenant Becker, who had in-sulted him the evening before.

While Captain Koch was disputing with this man as to which of them should fight Lieutenant Becker first another party arrived on the same errand, and before 6 o'clock three different persons had arrived, each desiring of "pig sticking" (as they call it in Germany) Lieutenant Becker. At a quarter before 6 Becker himself appeared, having been traveling all night, to find five persons waiting to avenge themselves upon him, four of whom he had never seen.

Amid a babel of tongues a carriage arrived, and Fraulein Anna stepped out in the ordinary costume of a woman and stood looking at the disputants and laughing. When she had explained that she had replied to the captain's challenge and had insulted the four other challengers all except Koch and Becker joined in the laugh. But to please the lady the four strangers insisted on the two most interested making up their quarrel, and they shook hands.

Ready-Made.

There's a big difference.

The designing, pattern-making, style-selection, and tailoring work of real SCHLOSS garments is strictly on a par with the best "one-at-a-time" custom shops. You must not confuse such work with any ordinary "Ready-Mades." The first are carefully tailored over exact measurements to some high-class merchant's definite order; the second quickly made in quantities to approximate "sizes"—then sold to any buyers that can be found.

You will find that SCHLOSS-Baltimore Clothes satisfy every requirement of critical taste, and offer the advantage of immediate service, and no disappointments. See the splendid new Fall Models today,—at.
